From the Paris Gazette, dated October 13.

Venice, September 22.

Letters from Verona tell us, That the Duke of Vendome arriv'd at Defenzano on the 15th, and went from thence to San Benedetto: That Barks with Foot on board arrive daily at Defenzano, which Foot as fast as they are landed march towards the Camp at San Benedetto: That other Barks were come thither laden with Spoil taken from the Enemy, among which are 20 Pieces of Cannon; and that the Cavalry marches back through the Veroneze between the Lake of Garda and the Adige. The Imperialists having made several Attempts to surprize Defenzano, the French have provided for its defence by reinforcing their Troops in it, and securing several Posts thereabouts. They seem to have a Design to fortifie that Village, and some other Places about it, with Intrenchments and Pallisadoes, because they have survey'd them with exactness, and taken Plans of them. Notwithstanding which 'tis likely they will content themselves with the Precaution they have taken, to reinforce the Body of their Horse encamp'd at Goito with 12 new Regiments. 'Tis said the Imperialists within these few days receiv'd 200000 Florins; they wanted it extremely. Troops and Companies of their Soldiers, of 40 or 50 Men each, continue to pass through the Territories of the Republick in their way to Trieste, where they are to rendezvous. Some are of opinion that they will be taken on board the English and Dutch Fleet, to be transported to the Kingdom of Naples to land on that side towards Apuleia; And that that Fleet will put into the Port of Santa Croce belonging to the Republick of Ragusa, whither Provisions will be sent to it from the Country belonging to the Emperor lying at the bottom of the Adriatick Gulph; But others cannot perswade themselves that such a Fleet will come in the beginning of Winter into so narrow a Sea, where there is no Harbour capable of receiving them; and think rather that those Forces which are marching towards Trieste, are intended to be employ'd in Hungary, whither the present Circumstances of Affairs require speedy Succours to be sent.

From the Camp at San Benedetto, Sept. 28. Since the Duke of Vendome arriv'd in this Camp, he has been several times to view the new Works that were made during his absence along the Secchia, and found them much to his liking. The Heats are very great at present, the lesser Rivers and Canals are quite dry, and very little Forrage is left. The Enemies suffer very much, and abundance of them are Sick; And yet 'tis rumour'd they are about to march on some Enterprize, which is confirm'd by Deserters. This report having been current several days ago, and the Enemy not having yet broke up, probably 'tis grounded on their sending some small Detachments towards Trieste. The News we have had from the Trentin since the Duke of Vendome left it, is, that when the Army was marching back from Trent, the Sieurs de Chamillart and d'Aubeterre who brought up the Rear burnt all the Villages which on the Army's advancing towards Trent had been quitted by the Peasants, except one, the Inhabitants of which comply'd with the Duke of Vendome's Orders, and did not take Arms but kept at home; but this Village the Enemy burnt. The Count de Medavi who was left in the Trentin with 5 Battallions, has sent Advice that the Baron de Vaubonne had advanc'd with 6000 Men of Regular and Militia Troops to attack him, but, finding him in a condition to give him a warm Reception, retir'd. Since which we learn, that 1000 of the Enemies having retrerch'd themselves on a Hill near Nago, to cut off the Communication between that Castle and Riva, the Count de Medavi attack'd and drove them off the Hill. To day the Duke of Vendome sent him order to blow up the Fortifications of Nago, Arco, Torbole, and Riva, and to return thither with all the Troops he commands. The foremost of those Troops which follow'd the Duke of Vendome from the Trentin arriv'd in this Camp on the 25th; half of them are now come, part of them stop at San Giacomo near this Place on t'other side the Po; But the Cavalry halted at Castiglione, where they may easier get Forrage, and from whence they can join the Army in one day, if it shall be found necessary.

From the Hague Gazette, dated October 22.

Lausanne, October 5. We have Advice from Rovergue, that the Camisars having fallen into that District, have burnt several Churches and plunder'd some Villages, among others Monnet, Veuveres, St. Pierre, and St. Vincent. After which they divided themselves into two Bodies, one of which took towards the Mountains, the other towards St. Affrique, where there are Malecontents in Arms as well as in the District of Albigeois. They write from Nismes, that at Durfort near Anduse the Camisars have defeated two Companies of the Regiment of la Fare, of which not a Man escap'd; and cut down 50 Dragoons in another Place. That they have made an Irruption into the Vivarez and burnt three Churches. That several Officers have found means to get to them, but that the Sieur Estor, a Draper's Son of Nismes, who had a Commission from one of the Potentates in the Grand Confederacy, is seiz'd at Pont St. Esprit. A Merchant newly arriv'd from Nismes, assures us, that the Camisars in revenge for six of their Women being put to death, have burnt eight Villages in the Neighbourhood of Uzez and put all the Inhabitants to the Sword; Of which we have a Confirmation in the Letters from that part of the Country. 80 of the Camisars being met by the Miquelets near Vauvert, and 4 of them being taken by the superior Number of their Enemies, the rest gave the Marshal de Montrevel to understand, that if he put those 4 Men to death, they would revenge it on a greater Number of old Catholicks: But the Marshal giving no heed to their Menaces, and causing those 4 Men to suffer a cruel Death, their Companions put themselves on the March, and tore out the Tongues and Eyes of the first 2 Roman Catholicks they met; after which they advanc'd to Galargues where they put 74 more to the Sword. The last Advices from the Sevens tell us, that the General Officers

Officers of the King's Troops, in a Council of War held at Bagnols, pass'd a Resolution, to oblige the old Catholicks to retire with their Effects out of the open Country into the Towns, and that the Magistrates of the several Towns should give 5 Sols a day to those who had nothing to live upon.

For what relates to the Rupture between the King of France and the Duke of Savoy, we refer to the Supplement to the Courant publish'd on Saturday.
